

agency of the deranged Vayu and Kapham. In cases, which indicate the predominance of the deranged Pittam, purgings should be induced with the help of Trivit. A compound consisting of Trivrit, NsLgaram, and* rock salt pounded together and taken with sugar and honey, or that composed of Haritaki and Vidanga pounded together and administered through the vehicle of cow's urine acts as a purgative. Eranda oil irt combination with a decoction of Triphala, twice as much as the former, acts as a good purgative. In diseases indicating an extreme predominance of the deranged Vayu, *he patient should be first fed and then caused to belch out the ingested food- Hollow bamboo, stems, to the lengths of six, eight, and twelve fingers respectively, and with apertures to the girth of a Karkandu fruit, should be cut out and used for the purpose of applying enematas ; the patient to be thus treated should be laid on his back during the application. This rule should be likewise observed in applying enematas of the Niruha class. The full, middle, and small doses of clysters (fluid to be syringed into the rectum) must not exceed six, three, and a halp Pala weights respectively. One part of Pathya, two parts of Aksha, and four parts of Dhatri pounded together and treated with the expressed juice of Shatavari and Bhringaraja in the manner of a Bhabana cure all dis-tempers of the body.

CHAPTER CXCVI.

DHANVANTARt said :—The group of drugs known as Madhuradi Gana, which are possessed of disease-killing properties, consists of Shall, Yassthika, wheat, mil^{1*}, clarified butter, honey, marrow, Shringatakam, barley corn, Erbaru, Gokshuram, Gambhari, lotus seeds, raisins, dates, Vala, cocoanut,